The galleries of the House of Representatives were the objective point yesterday morning of the fortunate members of society who could secure cards of admission to hear President Wilson read his own message, and thus witness history in the making.

Mrs. Wilson, who sat in the President's box, was accompanied by Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, Miss Hagner, Mr. John Wilson, Mr. Albert Wilson, and Dr. C. Grayson, U. S. N.

The ballroom was beautifully decorated with quantities of pinus, ferns, sprays of spring blossoms, and miniature cherry trees in bloom. The effect produced by the artistic decorations resembled an old-fashioned garden in bloom. One end of the ballroom was reserved for general dancing, and an orchestra played throughout the reception.

Assisting Mrs. Bennett in receiving her many distinguished guests were Mrs. Arthur Lee and her house guest, Mrs. McKee.

Two hundred guests were present, including Mrs. Bryan, Mrs. Garrison, Mrs. Roosevelt, and other Cabinet ladies and members of the judiciary. Senatorial, Congressional, residential, and diplomatic circles thronged the large ballroom. Logan, Miss Agnes Bennett, Miss Agnes Hay Wilson, and Miss Genevieve Clark, stood in a bower of pink rambles, while opposite was a rustic vine-covered fence enclosing a garden of spring flowers. Flowers and palms branched the walls.

Davis, Mrs. George T. Porter, Mrs. William D. Bowie, of Baltimore; Mrs. Fleming Howell, Mrs. Earl W.
